Practicing Family Medicine in Yellowknife

We are currently looking for permanent family practitioners to join our primary care teams. Yellowknife serves as the referral centre for the Northwest Territories (NWT), as well as the Nunavut Kitikmeot region. This unique practice area gives our family practitioners a total catchment area of 50,000 covering close to 15% of Canada's geographic land area!

"A sense of adventure, the broad scope of medicine, and a generous and hassle-free contract are what brought me up to YK. The people and the land are what made me stay." - Dr. Alyssa Titus.

Yellowknife is the capital city of the Northwest Territories (NWT), and within our small urban centre you have access to shopping, festivals, recreational facilities, team sports, restaurants and so much more. Our airport operates daily flights to keep us connected to the rest of Canada and we have year-round road access to Alberta. Yellowknife and its residents are welcoming to newcomers and you will soon see why so many physicians call Yellowknife home.

As a salaried family practitioner, you would be working in collaborative multidisciplinary primary care teams. Our family practitioners have the option to focus work solely in primary care or to have a broader scope by also working in services such as hospital acute care, obstetrics, hospitalist medicine, and other specialized services.

Travel clinics are an important part of the practice and are typically 1 – 3 days in length depending on the location. These clinics could bring you throughout the communities surrounding Yellowknife to experience the indigenous cultures of Dene, Inuit and Metis. The NWT is leading the country in cultural competency and cultural safety training for our practitioners for better patient care. We are also employing technology to push the boundaries on how we can provide the best virtual care to our communities.

Yellowknife is the newest University of Alberta family medicine residency training site as of 2020, allowing our practitioners to help train the next generation of family physicians.

Our vibrant and collegial groups (specialists as well as primary care) of physicians are looking forward to having you on our team!
